Butler Family Biographies

Peter Butler

Peter Butler (1789-1856) was born in Pulaski County, Kentucky, to John Butler and Elizabeth Dixon. He later moved to Barren County where he married his wife, Rachel Cook(e) Murphy (1788-1874) on July 25, 1811. He served as a Major in the War of 1812 and as Captain in the Black Hawk War of 1832 where his son Ira served under him. He moved first to Warren County, Kentucky in 1816, and then to Warren County, Illinois in 1830. In 1831 he surveyed and founded Monmouth, Illinois after turning down the opportunity to survey the new town of Chicago. In Monmouth he served as surveyor, sheriff, mayor, county commissioner, and one term in both the Illinois House of Representatives and Senate. His son Ira Butler and son-in-law Thomas Hutchinson helped found Monmouth University (now Western Oregon University). He and his wife had ten children, five of whom made the journey with them to the Oregon Territory in 1853, where he joined his son Elijah who had traveled there in 1850. Peter died of typhoid fever on June 24, 1856 and is buried with his wife in the Butler Davidson Cemetery. He died intestate, and a suit was brought against the remaining Butler family and their heirs in 1937 over their rights to land presumably owned by Peter Butler.

He is believed to have selected the name of Monmouth for the new town in Polk County, Oregon Territory (presumably after Monmouth, Illinois where the Butler family came from), and broke the tie vote between the two possible names: Dover and Monmouth. He served as Justice of the Peace in Polk County, Oregon from 1853 to around 1880. Ira helped found Monmouth University (now Western Oregon University) and served as president for its Board of Trustees from 1855-1882.
