This past year at OCE has often been referred to as the "Year of Change". Truly it has been! With the Student Center have come changes — new attitudes, new policies, new atmosphere. Years of planning and dreaming have made possible the most modern and versatile building on our campus — one the students, faculty, and townspeople will be proud of for many years. The addition of the new heating plant north of the Student Center freed ground behind Todd Hall for future buildings and campus use. It has also marked the end of usefulness of the smokestack, an old landmark of Monmouth and OCE. Although students protested its removal, on a cold, sunny day in January, the smokestack came crashing down to become instead a pile of bricks, to be gathered up by waiting students, eager to obtain a souvenir. This "Year of Change" has been the last year at OCE for the above members of the college staff, who are retiring or resigning. To these people, the editor and staff dedicate this book, the pictorial record of OCE's "Year of Change."
De Borgard,

Editor
O.C.E. President

Oregon College of Education, in a strict sense now the only college of education in Oregon, is dedicated to the preparation of excellent teachers and to the provision of leadership in teacher education. This is a high calling in a society which reveres education as the touchstone for success.

The extent to which we are successful in the first of our objectives, the preparation of excellent teachers, depends more upon the excellence of you, the students, than upon the excellence of the curriculum or even upon the excellence of us, the faculty. For the most important single factor in determining the excellence of a teacher is the student himself. His personality, his intellectual potential, his enthusiasm—these qualities must, to a major degree, be characteristics of the raw material upon which the faculty and the curriculum build.

The reputation of your College, our reputation as teachers of teachers, will be determined by your abilities and by your success.

Not only, then, do the futures of many children depend upon you, but the future of the College and of its faculty depend upon your success.

We wish you the very best!

President

CLASSES

OCE's business is to train teachers. Here, in four years of preparation, students become qualified to teach. Many term hours and many classes are devoted to teaching OCE students to teach. The pictures on these pages represent a few of these classes.

Mary Lee Wilson, a student teacher in science at Central High School, helps a student in one of her classes.

Student teaching is important to an OCE student. During this "practice" term in the classroom he finds himself as a teacher and learns valuable techniques and skills he will be able to use later on.

Henry Hanson and pupils at Central High inspect a school paper.

Kay Lukinbeal, student teacher in the 6th grade at Monmouth Elementary School, helps instruct the class in Social Studies.
Music education is one of the required courses to be taken by OCE students majoring in elementary education. Here the class is learning how class room instruments can be effective in a class room orchestra.

Larry Axmaker puts the finishing touches on an article he has made in art education class.

Barbara Adolph and Louise Anderson concentrate on sawing a large gourd in two. They plan to make both pieces into drums, as children could in a class-room.

Audio Visual Aids is a class designed to teach OCE students the utilization of aids in the classroom. Here Loyd Waite tries his hand at running a tape recorder.

P. E. in the Grades is really an action class. Here students learn the games, rhythms, and other physical education activities they will need to know for their own teaching.

Members of the P. E. in the grades class "heel, toe, and away we go". This is quite strenuous exercise for so early in the morning.
Another student teacher, Sandra Calkins, teaches arithmetic to 4th graders at Monmouth Elementary School.

Jan Leninger is shown here helping instruct grade school children in the art of the trampoline. She is a student teacher in physical education.

OCE students may do work toward a special degree in education if they so wish. At the speech and hearing center they may work with speech defective children as Dr. Mulder, director of the center, is doing here.

DEsert
GRADUATION

Education is a companion which no misfortune can depress, no crime can destroy, no enemy can alienate, no despotism can enslave. At home a friend, abroad an introduction, in solitude a solace, and in society an ornament. It chastens vice, it guides virtue, it gives, at once, grace and government to genus. Without it, what is man? A splendid slave, a reasoning savage.

By: Joseph Addison
Three pairs of students representing two generations graduate.

From top to bottom:
Charles Gates and his mother, Mrs. Gates.
Maurice Cook and his mother, Mrs. Cook.
Diane Magnuson and her mother, Mrs. Magnuson.

Students line up for graduation.
The result of saving money, staying up all night studying, going without the newest fashions, doing without, and WORRYING!!

Parents and newly grads exchange congratulations at reception held in the Grove.

In pre-conference play, the OCE Wolves displayed a brand of basketball which indicated promising results in forthcoming Oregon Collegiate Conference play. However, the start of league play found the Wolves severely depleted by the loss of 3 starters, leading scorer (23-7) Ron Jones, leading rebounder, Al Harter, and playmaker Roy Reeves.

The OCE Five, handicapped by lack of height, fought valiantly in every contest and was in contention for victory in all but a few instances.

TENNIS

Row One: Eddie McMahon, Howard Haynes, Coach McCullough, John Alexander, Lanny Nivens, Art Ellis, Arlen King.

ELLIS in action.

OCE's 1961 racqueteers stroked their way to a victorious season on the tennis courts, emerging with a 6-5-1 record.

The varsity tennis squad consisted of senior and captain, "Steady" Eddie McMahon; junior, Art "Clover" Ellis; sophomore, Lanny "Rookie" Nivens; and freshman, John "Tiger" Alexander and Arlen "Kong" King.

In conference play, the Wolves finished second to the championship squad from Southern Oregon.
