Good Evening Sweet Darling.
Here I am back to spend my daily time with you. I feel a lot closer to you when I'm writing you a letter like this. It's almost as if I were sitting having a nice chat with you. The big difference is that if I ever really talked with you our conversation wouldn't only be the punctuation which spaced our love making. Start punctuation there would be too. We could probably leave out the punctuation altogether— including caps—and concentrate on the body of the composition (naturally you knew I was going to say the body of the composition didn't you? To what other body would I be referring, as if you didn't already possess it?). That little composition, collaborated on by the two of us would be the greatest masterpiece of all time. There shall be many such works when I return to you Darling each a greater and more wonderful work than the preceding one. The only punctuation will come when—as I always will—I tell you how very much I love you. Just to be with you again. My Darling to make all these wonderful dreams of mine a reality. I have the knowledge that I will be with you some day in the not too distant future.
to start living nice more.

The letter I received today was numbered 39, but was really number 38. You're getting rather confused aren't you? Sweetheart? If or 38 million though I love them all. Your letters are all very sweet Honey.

Tonight I went to see the show and there was a very good band concert before the show. They are planning on having at least one band concert a week now. They played some very nice numbers including "The One I Love," a Victor Herbert melody, and several marches. The band did quite a good job although they were handicapped by having no string section in the band. It was very nice to hear music. When we're in Boston again we'll have to take in a Pops concert. They are very special. I guess you've probably heard of them. While the band is playing, pardon me I should have said orchestra, you can order wines, food, soft drinks, anything your heart desires. You merely write your order on a piece of paper and signal a waiter. There is no talk to disturb the other people. You'll like it very much I know.

I have to leave you now Honey. The trumpet is sounding the prelude to bed and the lights will be going out. I'll leave you now, to go to sleep with your face in my mind and your name on my lips, ready for our dream date.
Beautiful.

Bri back again just before Dan led off to the slaughter by the medics, who have ideas of puncturing me full of holes once more in the name of science they say. Even overseas we must get our annual shots. I don’t think I'll feel right in civilian life unless once in a while I have someone shoot me with a hypodermic. Of course, since the purpose behind it all is a good one I may as well let them do it. They’d do it anyway.

You and Dar are in agreement on what that fellow should have done. The one who married the girl Mary was telling you about. It’s too damned bad that people are so damned narrow-minded and hypocritical. They forced them into a marriage that will be no one any good and which will be no good for society. The only result will be a broken home or one in which there will be so much disillusionment that it would be better if it were broken up. The same people who wag fingers and tongues at such things are the very people who have been guilty of the same thing but were a little luckier. Most people are so damned hypocritical that it just ticks the devil out of me. They get a certain sadistic pleasure from such things. Their problem is not ours, thought to cause no matter when, where, or under whatever circumstances may be ours will be a very happy marriage my sweet. Happier than ever another could possibly be. Just because you’re you and I love you so much.

Remember very well how much presented your mother and father making you go to your grandmothers on Easter. I still think it was very mean of them. I have since learned just how truly bad it can be to be separated from you. It's over eight months now my Darling and seems much more like eight long wasted lifetimes. Your company does so many, and such indescribable things to me that nothing in the world could come close to comparing to your mere presence. If this be love then make the best of it.

So the book "Forever Amber" was a disappointment to you was it Honey? Was it banned in Boston? Boston is a wonderful place. The only city in the world which still believes in the stock. Now your description of it should say that it was somewhere near as raw as some of the items in F. Van Wyck Mason's books. Have you ever read "Stars on the Sea" or some of his others? I'm sure you'd enjoy them. Some day, soon I hope, you won't have to find pleasure vacuously, I'll be there to oblige.

Where are the words to the theme song of the submarine her concert on. You said you'd close them in the next dear letter, and I got that letter but no words to the song. Your memory is failing you my Sweet. You're a good artist but have a poor memory. Speaking of painting, you never did find out anything about me the way you did about Eddie Ross. Are you slipping Darling?
Thursday Night.

I thought I'd just continue this as the same letter since I didn't mail it today. You'll have to excuse me if this isn't very long darling but they gave me three shots today and my arms are as sore as the devil. I don't know just how long I'll hold out.

I did finish my job before I got the shots though. I did a few illustrations for a small handbook and also did a cover for the book. You will find one of the illustrations on this envelope. I'll put the other on the envelope. They came out quite well but can't be reproduced on a stencil so I guess they'll have to be photoengraved. They'll look very well if photoengraved. I guess I'm not going to hold forth as a clerk after all but will be a regular member of the drafting department. I'd like this a lot better than clerical work, although I intend keeping my hand in at typing so I'll be able to type when I start school.

The war in Europe seems to be just about in its last stages today we got the sensational news that the 9th Army has broken through and is now only 57 miles from Berlin. That's again of about 30 miles in about a day and a half. I hope it does end soon so this one will be finished just that much sooner. And the some the war ends the sooner get back to you, honey. Sounds reasonable doesn’t it?
While at the library yesterday I found a history of the far East put out by the US Armed Forces Institute. It looks very good and I think it will prove to be very interesting. I’ve got to keep up on my reading or I’ll lose state when I go back to school.

I’ve got to call it quits now honey. This arm is bothering me to beat the devil. I hope I can sleep all right. Goodnight now. Beautiful. I love you tremendously.

Friday morning.

This letter is dragging through three days now. I’ll be sure to mail it today so you can get it very soon.

I managed to get more sleep than I thought I would last night. The arm bothered me once or twice when I rolled over on that side but it wasn’t bad at all. It is still quite sore though.

As you can probably hear, it is raining again. It seems that it must rain every night. Last night the stars were out all night long and just as I went to bed the heavens opened and a downpour of rain came down. That storm the night before was the worst I’ve been through yet. It rained so hard that the oft mentioned “sheet of water” was a reality. There was no such thing as an individual rain drop. They were all fused into this one terrific downpour.

I'm going to cut a stencil for a V-Mail Mother's Day Card. I'll have to do that today so they can be run off on the stencil right away. I'll send one to there Robson just to get in practice. I hope that next year at this time I'll have the legal right to do it. She'll be a very nice mother-in-law, much better than I had ever hoped for, but then that's only to be expected since her daughter is so very much more than I had ever dreamed I would find any girl to be. I love every single thing about you, including your family. I think that in addition to the V-Mail card, which is mostly for you because I want you to see it, I will do up a regular card for your mother. One with a verse of my own making in it. Something light which she will like. I may send you the V-Mail card after all because some day you will have earned one. Just to let you know how it feels to receive one. Think your mother and father would get a kick out of that?

There's a new Alan Ladd picture on tonight. I'll have to see it if it isn't raining. It is "And Now Tomorrow" starring Ladd and Loretta Young. I like both of them so will probably enjoy the picture.
Kovalchuk won KP again this morning. He really hits that regularly now. I got a full canteen cup of iced apple juice from him this morning. I like it much better than iced iced coffee. Have you learned to make coffee yet Honey? You realize don't you that if only marrying you because of your cooking and that you should brush up on it. Of course there may be a few other factors which enter into my selection of you to be my wife—such as the fact that I love you more than you can ever know—and I shall.

Always,

Freddie
