Reactions to Play Varied
by Sandra Bliven

Shadow and substance were threaded through the minds of the audience in OCE's Campbell hall auditorium last Thursday and Friday night.

As part of any literary attempt at depicting an honest and rational view of a controversial subject, "Shadow and Substance," directed by Donald Cole, was an attempt to capture the nature, backgrounds, interests, and intellects of the audience. It is the belief of this reviewer that the reactions were hardly totally, not only because of the matter of the literary work but because the performance was so well done that a deep emotional and intellectual feeling was expressed.

The honesty and faith of the 17th serving maid of glorious was projected admirably by Deanna Baumman with a sweetness of countenance and a special charm that captivated the audience right from the start of the play. Special mention should go to her breeches which quite definitely added to the characterization of the young serving maid as convincing in this role that she may be dubbed "Brigid" in the future by confused stagegoers.

Darel Linda represented the intellectual and liturgical portion of Catholicism in the clergy, by portraying the Very Reverend Thomas, Canon Scharret who had a violent (justified for the sake of discovery) and sickly sentimentality, but an admiration of honesty and moral courage. Linda seemed to understand his role and gave a deep and utopian view of life but also showed the growing roles of his cassock and one might easily imagine him as the much travelled curate Father Corr in an efficient manner.

We have been quite fortunate to have George Q. Davidson, on our campus this year to provide stimulation with his intense writing and his ability to capture the nature, backgrounds, interests, and intellects of the audience that captivated the audience right from the start of the play. Special mention should go to his breeches which quite definitely added to the characterization of the young serving maid as convincing in this role that she may be dubbed "Brigid" in the future by confused stagegoers.

Play, 'Desperate Hours'

Saturday evening, March 2, 22 students set off in cars to attend Oregon State's presentation of "The Desperate Hours," a three-act thriller. The trip was sponsored by the Crimson Club and those attending were Gene Rosecrans, Mickey Rogers, Sally Howard, Jim Beck, Jerry Williamson, Don Ford, Mike Ford, Deanne Baumun, Jo Ann Anderson, Barbara Elliott, Sally Duckworth, Marie Brant, Dale Willard, Kay Brady, Marge Bailey, Ray Bartley, Nancy Bone, Virginia Chapman, Bob Krebs, Dolores Meyers and Ken Cadanour. This performance was culminated at the last meeting when plans were discussed for a night of co-ed plays to be presented in conjunction with Alpha Phi Omega, dramatic honorary. The plans will be given spring term and tryouts will be held for the whole school at some future date.

An exchange assembly with Willamette university was also discussed and planned. It will probably include a one-act play students set off in cars to attend by Bev and Tish

APD Slates Plays For Spring Showing

The campus chapter of Alpha Pi Omega, national dramatics honorary, will join with Crimson "O," dramatics club, to sponsor a night of one-act plays during spring term.

Colleen Pederson, APO director, announced that try-outs for parts in the three one-act plays will be publicized at the beginning of spring term. Kay Salter and Mickey Rogers are working with Colleen in the selection of one serious play, one comedy and one play with a religious theme.

This night of one-act plays will occur one week prior to the high school. Senior Week-end, on the OCE campus. This one-act play event will not conflict with the regular spring term play schedule. The one-act players will be chosen after the spring term cast director has made his selection of personnel.

Admitted to a private one. Those between the majority, simply have to try their luck and take chances. I can't force my boys' future, but I can help them which is very much to see your beautiful country again. I have lived in home economics subjects such as cooking, home management, , Beauty shops are ballet, Japanese dancing and piano—all these things, but I love my home country as you are doing in the States.

I love all my friends in the college.
