"Our Mr. Sun" To Be Shown Wednesday

"Our Mr. Sun," the first in a series of science films shown on television last spring, will be presented on the OCE campus next week. The film, which is in color and is outstanding in many respects, will be shown in the Monmouth Elementary school auditorium on Wednesday, July 24 at 1 and 2 p.m. The film was made available to OCE through the courtesy of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. All interested individuals are invited to attend the showings.

Crater Lake Tour To Leave Saturday

OCE students will be visiting Oregon's famous Crater Lake National Park this week-end. The two-fold purpose of the excursion is to give students an opportunity to study the geological aspects of the area, and to enjoy the recreational facilities of the park. The recent tally of students signed up was at 40.

The group will leave about 7 o'clock tomorrow morning by Gray Line bus. The trip itinerary will include lunch at Odel Lake, an afternoon lecture at the Sinnott Memorial, an evening naturalist lecture by one of the park rangers, an opportunity to see the sun rise over the lake, a hike on Garfield Trail, a guided tour around the rim of the lake, and a night at the famous Crater Lake Lodge. The tour party will leave the lake about noon on Sunday.

Dr. Anton Postl, associate professor of science at Oregon College of Education, will serve as director and guide for the tour.

an opportunity to all in attendance to witness an experiment in presentation which is unique for OCE.

Governor Holmes To Speak at OCE

The Honorable Robert D. Holmes, governor of Oregon, will deliver the main address at the convocation commemorating the 75th anniversary of the founding of Oregon College of Education as a state-supported institution. Preceding the speech by Governor Holmes, President Emeritus Charles A. Howard will present a talk on the history of OCE and its contribution to public education in Oregon. Dr. Roy E. Lieuallen, president of Oregon College of Education, will introduce the speakers.

The program is scheduled for Tuesday, July 30, at 11 a.m. in Campbell hall auditorium. All friends of the college are cordially invited to attend.

Woodcock Named To College Staff Job

Dr. Roy E. Lieuallen, president of Oregon College of Education, recently announced the appointment of Dr. Richard W. Woodcock as assistant professor of psychology at OCE. The appointment is subject to the approval of the Oregon State Board of Higher Education.

Dr. Woodcock comes to Monmouth from Corvallis where he has served as director of special education in the Corvallis public school system for the last two years. He has held an assistantship at the University of Oregon and has been a part-time instructor for Oregon State college and the General Extension Division.

Dr. Woodcock received his BS, MEd and DEd degrees from the U. of O., in 1949, 1953 and 1956, respectively. He has also studied at SOCE, OSC and Portland State college. His major fields of study were psychology,

Program To Feature Student-Faculty Talent

The curtain will rise on the gala 1957 summer session variety show next Tuesday at 11 a.m. in the Campbell hall auditorium. The program will consist of Hawaiian dancing, a harmonica duet, humorous readings, singing solos, and instrumental solos.

Del Brown, a graduate student at OCE this summer, will be master of ceremonies of this production. The cast will consist of both undergraduate and graduate students, and some of our talented OCE professors.

The show is the result of last summer's survey, in which many students requested an activity of this type. The program is geared to entertain with a wide scope of acts. Everyone should plan to attend Tuesday morning for an enjoyable program.

Gene Rosaschi is chairman of the program, Karen Ashby is the publicity chairman for the production, and Dr. Edgar Smith, assistant professor of music at OCE, is the faculty adviser.

This program is open to the public.

Eire and North Ireland Visited By OCE Summer Tour Group

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Lamron is publishing this series of reports so that OCE students at home may follow the OCE summer tour group and share some of their experiences. The article this week is written by Maude Niver and Helen Clem, members of the summer tour group.

The Empress of France was a day late arriving at Liverpool, owing to the long way around it followed to avoid icebergs in the more northern waters.

The Imperial Tours guide met us at the dock and had a bus waiting to give us a quick tour of downtown Liverpool, and then we were taken to the railway station to board a train for Holyhead, Wales. At Holyhead a steamer was waiting to take us across the Irish Sea to the port of Dun Laoghaire, Eire.

Dun Laoghaire is named for King Laoghaire, who was the first king of Ireland. The tour members were surprised to find palm trees growing in Eire, so far north. The group was told that the frost does not hit the lower parts of the island even in winter.

We Arrive in Dublin

It was a short drive from Dun Laoghaire to Dublin where accommodations were awaiting us at Jury's hotel. This hotel is in the heart of Dublin close to O'Connell Square.

The evening was spent by most of the members in sightseeing, mailing cards back home and in general getting the feel of the land.

On the morning of July 6 we were met at the hotel by Eugene McKeeren and Barney O'Farrell who acted as our guide and driver, respectively, for the tour of Eire. The name of the bus was "FindLater," we never knew why.

Our trip started early in the morning. We turned south of Dublin, again passing through Dun Laoghaire.

The road signs were intriguing to us, like the sign "Road Up" instead of "Under Construction." For a curve the sign read "Danger—Dead Slow," with a curved line through it. The school signs showed a boy and a girl with the word "Scoil." The rest station signs were usually given in both Gaelic and English "Fir — Men" and "Mna — Women."

Winding Country Lanes

The bus wove in and out of the narrow winding lanes of the countryside and the even narrower streets of the little villages. Eugene would tell something about each little place that had a legend or a bit of history.

The round towers built in the monastic towns as a protection against the marauding Danes of the 10th century, and the Norman castles of the 11th and 12th centuries, provided interesting sights to our group of Americans who had only known them in story book form. The ruins of many of these old structures can be seen on nearly any highway, the thick walls crumbling after being destroyed by the Cromwell forces 300 years ago.

Blarney castle was our one great experience and the highlight of our tour. All but one was successful in kissing the Blarney Stone. Now, unfortunately, she has to listen to all the eloquence of the others.

Note of warning to OCE students — Professor Noxon kissed the stone several times!

The natural beauty surrounding Blarney castle was such that we regretted leaving. Ross castle on Lough Leane is beautiful, but not as impressive as Blarney castle.

Much To Be Seen

Time and space cannot be found to tell all the wonderful things that we saw. We traveled many hundreds of miles encircling the southern coast of Eire. Night stops were made at Wexford, Cork, and a two night stop at Killarney.

It was at Killarney that most of us took a spin in an Irish jaunting cart. One hangs on for dear life as the cart jounces along around corners. It seemed like a long ways to the ground so no chances were taken. A little of the thrill was gone, however, when we found that the Irish jaunting cart is for the tourist. The true Irishman rides in a two-wheeled cart called a "Trap," pulled by a small horse or a donkey.

The shops at Killarney invited the women of the group to invest in China, linen and woolen goods. Now they are trying to pack cups and saucers in suitcases, just hoping that they will go through without being in pieces.

Now we are preparing to leave Belfast tonight for Scotland, after being here three days. It has been fortunate for our finances, no doubt, that this is the greatest holiday of the year for the people of North Ireland. The 12th of July is the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne. Stores closed at noon on the 11th and only candy stores remained open.

On the morning of Friday, July 12, we watched the famous

Orange Day Parade. Thousands of men and boys, carrying their colorful banners passed along Royal Avenue. We had a full view from the lounge of our hotel, the Grand Central. The bagpipe bands took the fancy of our group and several rolls of film were used to take the passing show.

The crowds showed interest and enthusiasm but we saw no unpleasantness or rivalry as some feared would take place. It was like a crowd we could see on our own streets, in the U.S., during the Fourth of July.

The next report will come from Scotland, where the group is at present.

At the Wednesday luncheon of the Graduate club the graduates put aside their anxieties about the approaching examinations while they listened to the speaker for the day.

The Polk county branch of the Association for Childhood Education is holding its annual silver scholarship tea at the home of Mrs George Harding, 405 S College street on Tuesday, July 23, between 3 and 5 p.m. All who are interested are invited to attend.

A full tuition scholarship for one term is made available to a deserving Polk county high school senior each year through funds raised by the association. Speech-Hearing Center 'Bursting at Seams'

The Western Oregon Cooperative Speech and Hearing Center in Campbell hall is "bursting at its seams" this year.

Dr. Robert Mulder, director of the speech and hearing clinic, announced a new high in the summer session enrollment. A total of 15 boys and girls vary in age from five to eight years old are being exposed to a sizeable dose of speech correction. Some of the children of the group are in the clinic for the first time, while others are taking a second session.

Has Three-Fold Purpose

The clinic was set up for a three-fold purpose of (1) working with youngsters with problems involving speech (2) discussing speech problems and assisting parents in the understanding of their child's problem and (3) exposing Oregon College special education students to basic clinical techniques in the field of speech correction.

The clinic is open five days a week, however therapeutic sessions are held only for one hour a day, three days a week, Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Though only three hours a week are spent in therapy, many hours of beforehand preparation are required. Clinical interviews must be made and the children must be put through a series of tests to determine whether or not they are eligible for enrollment in the clinic. Each clinician is assigned a group of children, arrangement of the group depending upon the diagnosis of the child.

Each clinician must work out lesson plans which will encompass the problems of the entire group. This requires many hours of preparation and research. Tuesdays and Thursdays are, therefore, set aside for this purpose. Also, the students are given many pointers and detailed training on how to help the various children assigned to them.

Student Therapists Listed

Student therapists in the clinic this summer include: Mrs. Olive Barnhardt, Gates; Mrs. Porter; Mrs. Heisinger, Escondido, California; and Helen Bergeron, Monmouth. These students will not only strive to help Dr. Mulder correct the mispronounced sounds but will also try to discover the cause factor and, in cases where it is possible, will attempt to eliminate the cause.

Hours spent in the clinic are always very interesting and exciting to the children since the type of therapy practiced never becomes monotonous. Concentrated efforts on one sound is always of short duration and consequently never tiring to the children. Clinicians are always looking for new games, pictures and techniques which may help stimulate the children during therapy.

Parents Attend Discussion

During the hours the children are receiving speech therapy the parents of the children are invited and requested to attend a discussion type parental guiding session. This session meets just across the hall from the speech clinic. In these sessions the parents receive helpful hints for assisting their children at home, also unfamiliar speech problems are explained by Dr. Mulder and a general discussion is held during which the immediate speech problems are explained and discussed.

Progress Varies in Students

Progress is made more rapidly by some children than by others. This is no cause for alarm for parents. Age is a contributing factor and group type therapy inevitably exposes age span.

The Western Oregon Cooperative Speech and Hearing Center on the OCE campus is one of five centers in the state of Oregon. This center serves Tillamook, Yamhill, Lincoln, Marion, Polk and Benton counties.

A diagnostic and consultative service is provided to parents and teachers of children with functional speech disorders.

OCE Student therapists in the Western Oregon Cooperative Speech and Hearing Center listen closely as their students practice new sounds.
