Keywords: Peter Sears Poetry Prize, poetry

*toss a pinch of salt over your left shoulder.
diffuse heady smoke of burning white sage.*

(for the boy who touched me in biology)

*offer a hushed, urgent prayer to the goddess.
press and preserve three small asters for patience.*

(for the junior who catcalled me in a freshman hallway)

*streak dollar store eyeliner down flushed cheeks, running in watery rivulets.
press your fingertips to the ink and smear. prepare for battle.*

(for the drunk who crooned vulgarity while waiting behind me at a safeway, breath reeking of piss-poor beer)

*rub blood on your chin and grow your nails into claws.
wrap your body in linens, protect against the frigid, biting wind.*

(for the man who groped me in a disney world crowd, four steps behind my dad)

*squeeze blades of grass into yellow pulp, feel the earth on your tongue.
no weapons, only wit and spite.*

(for the predators who handed me shame,
claimed it was my burden to bear:
you are a speck in this yawning void

of a universe)

may our fear now grip you.
