Announced by a fanfare of trumpets, our All-American, Tom Jones, chosen 1947 All-American, stood in the OCE physical education building Friday night amid cheers from an expectant crowd.

(never let it be said that women can't keep a secret!-21 of these four-day of school, who left from Cottage Grove, drove up into the school lounge from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. today, Monday, November 24.

Dr. Warrington Spoke Tuesday

"We need to know how the universe works and with a great but limited power to learn to work with these. A religion must, somehow, help one to live adequately at whatever age one is in the world."

So declared Dr. Ernest W. Warrington, head of the department of religious education, last Monday at 11 a.m.

"Ours helps the individual by offering him an opportunity for adventure in getting knowledge that has been revealed by the great minds of the ages. Religious education should stimulate one to work out a personal philosophy of life. A personal philosophy will point the way to constructive use of the tools of civilization."

Dr. Warrington stated that we need a great enough purpose to accomplish the use of the tools of civilization. "One's philosophy will point the way to constructive use of the tools of civilization."

Land Owners To Plant Seedlings

Transferring of approximately 5,500 seedlings from the Forest Service Tree Nursery at Cottage Grove to the land already owned by the land owners has just begun and will be completed by early January, according to the Joint Committee on Forest Conservation.

Areas adjacent to the Fairchild, Mount Hood, and McKenzie Forests were selected to receive the trees, which are to be used primarily to restore fire-injured forest lands in the Douglas fir region and used against the spread of fire and disease to adjoining land.

It was emphasized by Warren A. Tilton, forest engineer for the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, that the seedlings will be planted by private land owners including lumber, pulp and plywood manufacturers.

After the impressive initiation ceremony, the guest dancers prevailed. It's trite, but a warmup call to the gay mood of the evening was made by Lois Fletcher, student director, and Campfire, 8 p.m., CH 15. Frontal: a first edition copy and has an inscription signed by Comte de Buffon, an 18th century Anglican prelate. It bears the date 1781. Clue: "The acting was exceptional and I feel that the cast was excellent."

Some of his works are included in the collections of the University of Oregon, the University of Washington, the University of California, and the Library of Congress. "Implementing the Democratic Ideal" was the title of Dr. Baner's article, which he requested initial pages of the magazine. His work was concerned with different democratic implications and democracy, and of how many of these implications and democracy would be useful to the present. The essay enumerated a few fundamental points that all democratic ideals have to be in order to be considered philosophies of democracy.

V.A. Wants All New Addresses

Veteran's dependents and beneficiaries who are in receipt of monetary benefits from the Veterans Administration should notify the V.A. immediately upon changing their legal mailing address.

This addresses, such as those for subsistence allowance, insurance disability and death compensation, cannot be forwarded to another address, V.A. said. These checks must be returned to the treasurer of the county or city in which the benefits were received.

The V.A. said it is concerned particularly with veteran's records, where changes in address occur frequently. In all cases, every change of address must be reported to V.A. promptly if delivery of checks are to be avoided.

Ancient Science

Four ancient scientific volumes that are valuable parts of a book collection were recently displayed on the OCE campus by Gene DeLue, an Englishman and 18th century Anglican prelate. It bears the date 1781. It was published in Latin and published by the Joint Committee on Forest Conservation.

"The Social Studies," a magazine, will point the way to constructive use of the tools of civilization. "One's philosophy will point the way to constructive use of the tools of civilization."

Transferring of approximately 5,500 seedlings from the Forest Service Tree Nursery at Cottage Grove to the land already owned by the land owners has just begun and will be completed by early January, according to the Joint Committee on Forest Conservation.

Aim of the Tree Nursery, now called the OCE campus, is to provide a source of pine seedlings for the landowners, who have been the major producers of the seedlings.

"It was a high point in the evening assembly. Our goal is to provide a continuing supply of pine seedlings for the landowners, who have been the major producers of the seedlings."

Meet Tomorrow Night

An important meeting for OCE ski fans will be held Tuesday evening, November 25, at 7:30 o'clock in room 10 of Campbell hall, Oregon College of Education, Monday, November 24, 1947.

POULS OPEN TODAY

All students are encouraged to acquaint themselves with the important student body in the student lounge from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. today, Monday, November 24.
OUR MOURN THE PASSING OF A FRIEND

Last week witnessed the passing of another prominent Oregon official, Willard L. Marks, president of the state board of higher education. His funeral was held in his home town of Albany on Friday afternoon, with two OCE students among those acting as pall bearers. The two students were Allan Petersdorf and Thomas J. Jones.

At the Albany college, lawyer, county clerk and president of the state senate, Mr. Marks was first appointed to membership on the state board of higher education in 1934. A round dozen times he was subjected to the pressure of the board, and only last year he was reappointed to board membership for another nine-year term.

In commenting on Mr. Marks' brilliant career, a Portland newspaper editor dwells upon the interest which the late board president manifested in the University of Oregon and the Oregon State college. We cannot think, however, that the Portland editorial writer meant to imply a certain limitation in Mr. Marks' educational concerns. We believe that he had a deep and sincere interest also in the well-being of the teachers' colleges at Ashland, LaGrande and Monmouth.

We mourn the passing of a friend, Mr. Marks.

EXCITMENT OVER TRIFLES

In America exceptions amount of worthwhile recognition are usually given only to those who make large contributions to civilization. It was, therefore, unfortunate that so much front page newspaper space was given over to the description of the royal wedding.

That excitement over trifles is apt to contribute to our youngsters growing up with a warped opinion of the way our fellow man in many of the admirable characteristics of our English neighbors.

During those dark days of the recent war, people in many lands were inspired by those allied men at Dunkirk who tried to make a flight of it and were forced to retreat to their homeland across the channel. The R.A.F. bomber formations, many of which suffered complete annihilation by the enemy, and those modern St. Georges who spurred their Spitfires and Hurricanes into deadly combat, caused most Americans to feel admiration for the common people of England. Probably no other nation in history has come through as admirably when as many blue chips were down.

One wonders if the late royal wedding was a climax to all that heroic wartime effort of the English common people.

The utter uselessness of the British royalty was never more conspicuously demonstrated than during the recent war. Now it looks as if the British nobility since they have been saved by the common people, are striving to get back into the picture.

At any rate it was nauseating to see the American newspaper page over-emphasized the royal nuptials.

Guilty consciences always make people coward.—Pilpup.

The noblest motive is the public good.—Virgil.
MANNERS GIVEN
Dress Rehearsal

By Lester McBroom

It has been found, upon careful study and analysis of the manners given on for the formal, that a good many of them are applicable to our weekly juke box frolic. I humbly beg the pardon of everyone who finds a corrupted courtesy imparted on this page and offer as my only excuse the fact that this was written under stress of request.

If you are not lucky enough to have a date for the dance you may come along and ask any girl present for a dance. If she is with someone else, it is a severe breach of etiquette to tear her from his arms or otherwise force her to the floor. A few threads under the breath of the escort will be necessary if they are deemed necessary for best results.

If you do have a date, you should call for her at the appointed time and wait in the hall until she appears. Making of the hrn, yelling outside or inside the door to let her know you are there is to be discouraged. Upon entering the hall, the couple should proceed to the cloak or powder rooms where they may leave their excess coats and then the man will wait for his date and dance the first round with her. Although it is not to be encouraged, a fair knowledge of a woman's gift of gab makes it seem excusable for a man to dance with another girl if his date doesn't show up after a reasonable period.

When going onto the floor, the girl should precede the man. In other words, you should never run out in the center, whistle and motion her to you. (If she seems reluctant, a slight push is permissible.)

At the end of the dance, a man may applaud. The lady never shall, although a few feminine witticisms and a slight stamping of the feet will surely add to the enjoyment of the party.

You may leave the dance any time you feel you are not seeing enough of your date or are dissatisfied for any other reason. The man should name the time if he wishes to call; if she should wish to go.

WITH REGrets

I need you but today,
To laugh away the tears;
To brush away my fears.
Yes, I need you here today.
I need your laughing eyes
To glow with mem'ries of romance;
To soothe when things go wrong.
Yes, I need your laughing eyes.

But if you must go,
I must go too.
I'll wait for some other time,
To laugh away my tears;
To brush away my fears.
Yes, I need you here today.
I need your laughing eyes
To glow with mem'ries of romance;
To soothe when things go wrong.
Yes, I need your laughing eyes.
Wolf Chatter
By Rollie Hamer

In a 50-minute scrimmage last Thursday night in Salem, Monmouth university's cagers ran up a 96-76 score on the Oregon College Wolves. This score seems very high, but the way both teams were playing, the ball through the hoop was remarkable.

Johnnie Lewis' Bearcats were much more advanced in their plays than the Wolves, but they should be, for they have been practicing about a month longer than the Knute-coached club. Williams' head-handling was certain and the three-man wave out in the front court was hard for the Wolves to check.

To sum this up in one paragraph, Williamette is going to be tough, but when the OCE five tangles with them on February 13 they had better watch themselves, for it will be a changed and improved ball club they meet.

A new member to the varsity this season, and showing a lot of class is Herb Kirby, clever little forward from Tule Lake, California. Watch this boy, he's a comer. Foster Thermopyle also shows a lot of hoop savvy, and should be heard from when he gets added college experience.

Barrell Smith, the kid from Beaverton, is hitting the hoop with considerable accuracy. One of the leading scorers last season, Smith is a fine team man along with his scoring ability.

Jack McElravy and Rapid Robert McCauley are two newcomers to the squad and would be welcomed with open arms on any varsity ball club.

A-A. Seagulls Lose Contest

The West House six-man touch football squad tallied another victory last Tuesday afternoon when they defeated the Arnold Arms Seagulls by a score of 34 to 14. The outstanding play of the game was made by "Tyke" Smith when he raced 80 yards for the third West House touchdown. Other spectacular touchdowns were made by Don "Hairless Joe" Gregg of the Seagulls who made a 75-yard sprint to pay dirt and a double-lateral play which covered 60 yards with Joe Roberts pulling the score.

West House took charge of the game in the first half with practically all of their plays clicking. Although Gregg inspired a Seagull rally in the third quarter with his aforementioned sprint which was closely followed by the Seagulls' second and final touchdown with Bill Pool on the receiving end of a pass, West House once more came to the fore in the latter part of the game. Other scores were made by Louie Thompson, Ben Ramsey and Joe Roberts, all of West House.

FORENSICS

Tuesday morning, November 19, at 10 o'clock, Mr. Harding and Mr. Van Maanen met with the forensic club to discuss the results of the Portland meet and to form new debate teams. Mr. Harding announced that applications have been made to the Willamette Valley Forensic League for membership. This affiliation will give the members an opportunity to appear in the monthly meets held on different Oregon campuses.

First trial debates among the forensic members will be held at 11 a.m. on Monday, December 2. The debates will all be on the question of Federal World Government. All forensic members are to take part in debate work.

In honor of "Complete Home Furnishers" Lay-Away Plan

We wish to announce that we have made arrangements with Oregon's well known Lay-Away plan, "Complete Home Furnishers." This is a plan especially designed to suit the needs of all those who are unable to purchase their furniture at one time. It is an easy plan, requiring only a small deposit, followed by regular payments. The buyers are able to take possession of the items at the completion of the plan. This plan is designed to meet the needs of those who require furniture for their homes but have no means to purchase it at one time.

IVCF Interests

Thanksgiving will have a deeper meaning for those who attend the IVCF meeting tonight at 7 p.m. Especially, when they hear Rev. Homer Leyte of Dal­las. He is remembered well by many students, from his previous visits to the campus, when he showed colored photographic slides taken while traveling over most parts of the United States. Mr. Leyte is much in demand as a speaker by young peoples' groups.

Along with his message, group singing and an instrumental duet are planned to make Thanksgiving more significant.
