Summer School Costs Deferrable from Taxes

A decision handed down by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals on May 21, 1950, provides for the deduction of summer school expenses in federal income tax forms as an ordinary and necessary business expense, in the opinion of the court, raising the question as to which summer school expenses are deductible and which are not. A CHALLENGE TO TEACHERS

Last summer a survey was made on this campus to learn something about the circumstances which distinguish the employed teachers and made their work more difficult.

One hundred problems and situations were presented to summer students for evaluation in terms of the amount of stress involved. Of these, 24 were selected above all others as a source of distress to teachers. This item was: "Children who never complete assignments except under compulsion, although they have the ability to do the work.'

Eighty-one percent of the 204 teachers cooperating in this survey listed this item as being a source of great annoyance or concern to them.

Turn to some rather interesting and challenging speculations. Are the children of Oregon lazy? Psychologists and parents will object to this interpretation, and with good reason. If the children are lazy, what could be the teacher's role? Or the system under which the teacher works? Or are there other causes?

At first glance it might appear that the teacher is creating troubles for himself by using important principles of learning and disregarding some normal characteristics of children. The key words, assignment, compulsion and ability, listed in the above item might lead the conclusion that teachers are forcing children to do things which are important to the teacher but not to children.

However, it is also possible that teachers are discovering the extent to which the assignments given to children are not in accord with good educational practices. Yet pressures exerted by the community, the administration, or the course of study, force the teacher into a role or type of teaching different from what he would like to be.

Whatever the cause may be, here is a challenge to teachers.

The survey was valid, almost four-fifths of the students on the campus this summer are troubled by children who do not respond satisfactorily to the work assigned. A matter which has such far-reaching implications, deserves the serious consideration of students and faculty alike.

I hope every teacher who is concerned with this problem will take full advantage of the resources and opportunities provided on this campus to arrive at a satisfactory solution for himself.

Louis Kaplan

Kaplan's Article Gets Wide Distribution

"The Attack on Modern Education," an article comparing specific achievements of the old and new schools, has been accepted for publication by Louis Kaplan of OCE, has won national notice.

First appearing in the Phi Delta Kappa, Journal of educational research, the article appeared in the Spring issue of the OCE Journal and was reprinted in pamphlet form by The Educational Digest for low-cost mass distribution to groups working for better understanding of our schools.

The Los Angeles School Journal reprinted the article in its May 21 issue, distributed to a large audience in Southern California.

A second article entitled "Right-Wing Thought and the Slackers" and dealing with the organized attempt to discredit and attack public education is also included in the pamphlet. The author of this article is Robert A. Field, field secretary of the nation-wide organization for the defense of education through education. The original report by Dr. Skelton was first published in Field's National School, January, 1951.

Popular Integrality, Researcher Reports

Popular in the campus group meetings are Dean of Women's Education. The key words, assignment, compulsion and ability, listed in the above item might lead the conclusion that teachers are forcing children to do things which are important to the teacher but not to children.

The research was conducted as part of the personality and psychosomatic checks included in the health service. The original report by Dr. Kaplan's article appeared in the Student Life, June 21 issue.

The exhibit of more than 100 paintings and drawings sent to England recently by Oregon College of Education from other colleges and universities.

Among those from Todd hall who have been star-gazing and moon-gazing this month are: Tina Parsons, Mary Lou Ogden, Melda Silver, Mary Nelson, Belch Mills and Harriet Lightle.

We are pleased to find that four new chairs have been placed on the sun deck at Jessica Todd hall.

There is much impressed by OCE's modern elementary school and commented at length on the large, low windows, movable furniture, and the size of the room. She said it was the "most usable, workable room" she had ever seen.

Miss Gordon is also teaching advanced primary education.

Strongman May Offer Body Mechanics Class

Miss Betty Strenglen will offer a class in Body Mechanics on Monday evenings from 7:00 until 9:00 o'clock if enough people are interested. This course teaches muscle relaxation and coordination for better posture and strength, no strenuous activity. It will be open to both men and women, and will be held in the modern dance room of the physical education building.
